Buried A Destructive Mole

Tony Keeting, our high class machinist and expert fancy gardener who claims to have the best garden in town, has been pestered with a mole rooting up his garden sassa for some time and not until last Friday was he able to head the sleek underground rodent from his routes under potatoes, lettuce, onions and sweet corn and in fact all else Tony had pride in and appetite for. Friday however, the ingenuity of man again proved itself superior to even hidden things possessed of life and graminiverous proclivities. Tony and the mole met, the mole coursing one of its usual routes and Tony on the back track. A beautiful catch it was and as much of a surprise to the gardener as to the mole, and after admiring his game for a moment, the depredations of the sightless wriggling varmint were also viewed, then the doom of the captive was sealed. Tony addressed his moleship thus: "You iss hell when you are alive; you iss no good det; raus mit; I bury you alive und pay fer vat you done alretty, py - -." The gardner quickly dug a mole. And into it he crammed the mole. "Now. Vat you think you little deif? I now can keep my garden lefel."
